CHARACTERISTICS/TRAITS OF A GLOBAL EDUCATOR

The Global Teacher:

* is a facillitator,
* employs a range of teaching/learning strategies,
* believes in lifelong learning,
*is concerned with the development of the whole person and the significace of personal esteem and responsibility, * promotes the discussion and understanding of issues from a global perspective within a framework of local, provincial, and national relationships,
* has a future's perspective,
*promotes an understanding of cultures within and beyond the local community,
* seeks to bridge the barriers between content and subject areas and promote cross-curricular activities,
* believes in sharing responsibilities for the learning process with children, colleagues, parents, and the community.

The Global School has the responsibility to:

* Encourage the real concerns of students to be aired and discussed within a caring and concerned environment in classroom environments which promote self worth and the appreciation of others,
* Attempt to ensure that students are not left with a sense of helplessness and hopelessness in the face of global problems and issues, through the development of action-related skills, enabling young people to be agents of change.
* Provide the climate and infrastructure to allow administration, faculty, and students to practise and develop critical thinking skills.
* Promote holistic learning.
* Provide an environment in which the learner infuses the global knowlege, skills, values, and attitudes into the knowledge and skill-base of existing curricula.
